A RICH MAN STARVED

"So Jones is dead?" said one Somerville man to another. "Yes, poor fellow," was the roply, "he's gone.

"What did he die of?" inquired the first speaker. "Starvation," was the answer. "Starvation! Good gracious, the man was worth $50,000." "I know that; nevertheless, he died of starvation. I'll tell you how it was: Jones was always fancying that there was something the matter with him, so he went to a doctor one day and had himself examined, and the doctor informed him that he had kidney disease, and that, besides taking medicine, he must diet himself. Said the doctor: 'You must avoid all kinds of salt meats, salt fish, potatoes and vegetables of every kind." Jones followed the advice, and found himself no better. He went to another doctor and, after being examined, was informed that he must avoid all kinds of fresh meats also. This did not do him any good, as he thought, and he went to another doctor, who highly approved of the advice which had previously been given, and further warned him against all kinds of pastry, likewise shell-fish, including oysters and clams. 'The best thing for you is a milk diet,' said this doctor, so Jones lived wholly upon milk. Not feeling himself any better he went to another doctor, who cautioned him to avoid milk above all things if he wanted to get well. This reduced Jones to a diet of cold water and fresh air and, finding himself no better under the regime, went to another doctor, who advised him to beware of drinking too much water and being too much in the air. This last advice cur off the last of Jones' article of diet, and he died of starvation, as

Capt. Hillard gives a remarkable instance of the way Texas streams have nities. "Father," replied the young man, of indulging in sudden and immense rises. which occured in the Nueces river a I am too much of a gentleman to take week or so ago. One of his partners tells of the occurrence in a letter to him. A goat-herder drove about seven hundred goats to water in the river, and while the goats were drinking just below a bend in the river, a mountain rise came down like a solid wall of water from ten to fifteen feet high, On one side of the around her neck and gave her a hearty stream was a perpendicular bluff and kiss. DRINKING DEAD INDIAN. - Last week, while out prospecting, says the Tuscarora Times-Review, Hon. J. B. Tolley, Charley Johnson and Tom Megan camped at the head of Wilson Creek. The water, delightfully cool and sparkling, trickled gently through a lot of loose rocks from a living spring above. The superior quality of nature's beverage induced the party to hold their camp there for a couple of days. On the third morning Mr. Tolley started out to gather some fuel with which to cook breakfast. Noticing some dry poles standing among the loose rocks above mentioned, he went after them for fire wood. On arriving at the spot, to his astorishment and disgust he found that the sticks were monuments indicating an Indian burial place, and lying around on the rocks which had evidently been placed there by human hands, were craps of rags and other articles usually found in aboriginal bone yards. The knowledge that for two days they had been drinking water filtered through dead Piutes effectually destroyed all interest in the breakfast question, and the party broke camp without preparing their usual matutinal meal.

THE KIND OF INVESTION NEEDED. -A new invention is a door lock that has no key. Married men who are in the habit of carrying a night key will kick against its introduction. It would be rather inconvenient to take the door off its hinges and lug it about with them until midnight or later. What is wanted is a lock with a keyhole that can be opened by simply winking at it when the male head of the house comes home and finds that incorrigible aperature making 300 revolutions a minute.

A tall, stylish-looking woman, leading greyhound, passed the balcony of a Saratoga hotel on which two gentlemen were standing.
